

The COSATU-affiliated Southern African Clothing & Textile Workers' Union (SACTWU) will commence a series of Matric Winter Schools in July 2015. These schools are part of the union's social responsibility programme, and aims to assist working class matriculant children with extra lessons in some of the more difficult subjects, to help them prepare for successful matric year-end exams.

Our Winter Schools have been run nationally every year since its launch in the year 2000, except in 2007 when a national wage strike took place by educators in our country. It typically lasts between 5 and 9 days.

The 2015 schedule is as follows:
